

BAMBOO PEOPLE

DISCUSSION & ACTIVITY GUIDE

Developed by Charlesbridge with Mitali Perkins and Kelley McDaniel, teacher at King Middle School in Portland, Maine
Decorations copyright © 2010 by Carol Chu

978-1-58089-328-2 • HC • $16.95
978-1-60734-227-4 • E-book • $15.99
Ages 11–14

Narrated by two teenaged boys on opposing sides of the conflict between the Burmese government and the Karenni, one of Burma's many ethnic minorities, this coming-of-age novel takes place against the political and military backdrop of modern-day Burma.

Chiko isn't a fighter by nature. He's a book-loving Burmese boy whose father, a doctor, is in prison for resisting the government. Tu Reh, on the other hand, wants to fight for freedom after watching Burmese soldiers destroy his Karenni family's home and bamboo fields. Timidity becomes courage and anger becomes compassion when the boys' stories intersect.

DISCUSSION AND ESSAY TOPICS

1) In her author's note, Mitali Perkins writes that her interactions with the Karenni people she met along her travels in Thailand led her to think of the bamboo plant as "an excellent symbol for the peoples of that region." What does she mean by this? Using quotes and examples from the book, write an essay explaining this symbolism.

2) Daw Widow is a strong-willed character treated with a great amount of respect by Chiko and his mother. She ultimately convinces Chiko's mother that her son should go to take the teacher's exam, despite the fact that it may be a trap. Why does Daw Widow's opinion hold so much weight? Why does she change her mind about Chiko's future?

3) When Chiko's father was captured, he called out, "Take care of your mother, Chiko!" (p. 6) Although Chiko replied that he would, he does not think that he has kept that promise. In what ways has Chiko taken care of his mother? In what ways has he not? Do you think Chiko has kept his promise, or has he failed? Why or why not?

4) Chiko carries around the pictures of his father and neighbor, Lei, during his time in the Burmese army. Why are these objects so important to him? What do they symbolize? Do you have any objects in your own life that have helped you through a difficult situation?

5) During his first days in the Burmese army, Chiko keeps telling himself, "Mind your own business. Keep out of trouble. Stay alive. One day at a time." (p. 39, 47). He believes the only way to survive is to keep to himself and obey his captors. Does this opinion change as time goes on? If so, what prompts this change?

6) When Tai declares that Chiko had nothing to do with the idea to use buffalo to finish the daunting task of clearing the river, the captain sends Tai to confinement. Chiko thinks, "It's done. Tai is going to confinement, and I'm not. So why do I feel like the one who's condemned?" (p. 82) What do you think of Chiko at this point in the book? What do you think of Tai? Have you ever been in a situation like this? Which character were you, and how did you feel?

DISCUSSION AND ESSAY TOPICS (CONTINUED)

7) Chiko teaches Tai how to read and write while they are both in the Burmese army. What does Tai teach Chiko? How is Tai an inspiration to Chiko? How does he help Chiko get through each day in the training camp?

8) When the captain chooses Tai for a “secret mission,” Chiko steps forward to take his place (p. 123). Why do you think Chiko made this decision? What do you think Tai thought and felt? What do you think the other boys watching and listening thought and felt?

9) How do Chiko and Tu Reh develop throughout the course of the book? How are these changes displayed? What do we learn about these boys through the other characters, as opposed to through their first-person narratives?

10) Both Chiko and Tu Reh’s fathers are absent from most of the book, but we do learn a lot about them through other characters, their sons in particular. How are these fathers different? How are they similar?

11) Education is very important to Chiko. He wants to be a teacher, and he believes that if Tai learns to read and write, it will help his sister, an orphan in Yangon. While listening to the captain talk about the Karenni as “rebels” and “insurgents,” Chiko thinks, “I’ve been taught not to believe anything the government says about the tribal people. But the other new recruits didn’t have someone to tell them the truth. All they have is this captain’s version.” (p. 48) Meanwhile, Tu Reh feels that education is a waste of time. How do these different views on education affect Tu Reh and Chiko’s perspectives of the world? Are these differing perspectives due to the education each boy received, or are they just a result of their individual circumstances? Or both?

12) What are Peh’s reasons for wanting his son, Tu Reh, to join him on the mission? When they find Chiko, Tu Reh says to his son, “I won’t command you, my son. A Karenni man must decide for himself. Leave him for the animals. End his life now. Or carry him to the healer. It’s your choice.” (p. 149) Do you think Peh wants Tu Reh to make a certain choice? Why or why not?

13) The grandfather asks Ree Meh to read a well-known passage from the Bible, Ecclesiastes 3:1–8: “There is a right time for everything:/ A time to be born, a time to die;/ A time to plant, a time to harvest. . .” (p. 170–171). This prayer was made into a song in the 1960s (written by Pete Seeger and made famous by The Byrds). What does this prayer/song mean to you? Does it remind you of anything?

14) Ree Meh’s reluctance to go to school reminds us that while the characters in this book are placed in difficult and dangerous situations, most of them are just children. What other instances in the book remind us of this fact? How would you respond to the events in the book if you were Tu Reh, Chiko, or one of the other children?

15) Throughout the second part of the book, the people in the refugee camp where Tu Reh lives keep referring to Chiko as “[Tu Reh’s] soldier.” Tu Reh is very bothered by this. Why? Why did he decide to save Chiko after all?

16) Nya Meh has been through a terrible ordeal. Captured by Burmese soldiers, she suffered verbal and physical assaults that are only hinted at in the book. Despite this, she is dedicated to healing Chiko. Why do you think she is able to do this? What role does her ordeal play in Tu Reh and Sa Reh’s reconciliation?

BEYOND THE BOOK. . .

About Modern Burma

Slightly smaller than Texas in size, the country of Burma shares borders with India, Laos, China, Bangladesh, Thailand, and the Bay of Bengal. It's a land of diversity, with over one hundred languages, several religions, fertile plains, and rugged highlands. The country was once described as the "rice bowl of Asia" and enjoyed one of the highest literacy rates in Southeast Asia.

Sadly that didn't last. Today about ninety percent of Burma's people live at or below the poverty line, and the country's health system is ranked second worst in the world. About ten percent of children die before the age of five, and the literacy rate has been plummeting each year.

How did the region's "rice bowl" become a place of suffering, disease, and hunger? It's a sad story of injustice and corruption.

Once ruled by Britain, Burma became an independent parliamentary democracy in 1948. Ethnic groups like the Shan, the Karen, and the Wa wanted to keep their independence and avoid being controlled by the Burmese majority. Despite tension and strife, the country survived as a representative government for fourteen years. In 1962, however, military leaders staged a coup and took control of the country.

Things went from bad to worse—the army shut down free elections, took over newspapers and businesses, and clamped down on freedom of expression, association, and assembly. People tried to resist, but the military brutally crushed student and worker demonstrations in the 1960s and 1970s. The government tortured and imprisoned anyone brave enough to speak out. At the same time, ethnic groups along the country's frontiers continued to struggle for independence. To fight these "insurgents," as they were labeled, the government began forcing young Burmese men into the army.

The military makes money by controlling industries like mining, logging, oil, transport, manufacturing, apparel, and electricity, and by regulating exports and foreign investment. What happens to all that income? Half is spent on the military and next to nothing on health care and education. And the rulers are lining their own pockets, of course. While the elite live in luxury, the vast majority of Burmese don't know if they'll be able to feed their families tomorrow.

The army tortures and kills members of minority ethnic groups, uses them for hard labor, and burns their villages. Thousands of people hide in the jungle as internally displaced people, while some flee across the border to Thailand to seek shelter in refugee camps. About one hundred forty thousand refugees live in nine camps along the Thai-Burma border. Since 2004, over fifty thousand refugees representing different minority groups in Burma have been resettled in other countries such as the United States, Canada, Australia, and Norway.

MAP OF BURMA/MYANMAR AND ITS SURROUNDING COUNTRIES

Quick Facts:*

Official name: Union of Myanmar

Form of government: Military regime

Population Estimate (2009): 48,138,000

Capital: Nay Pyi Taw

Official Language: Burmese

Official Religion: None

Monetary Unit: Myanmar kyat

Total area: 261,228 sq mi

*"Myanmar." Encyclopædia Britannica. 2010. Encyclopædia Britannica Online. 22 Feb. 2010
<<http://www.britannica.com/EBchecked/topic/400119/Myanmar>>.

What's in a name?

You may not find the country of Burma listed in some books after 1989. That year the military government changed the country's official English name from "the Union of Burma" to "the Union of Myanmar." Although the United Nations switched to Myanmar, the USA, the UK, and Canada are among the nations that refused to recognize this new name. "Burma" is what the Burmese people use in informal, everyday conversation, reserving the use of "Myanmar" for formal and ceremonial speech.

The capital of Myanmar, or Burma, was the southern city of Yangon, also known as Rangoon, until 2006 when the government proclaimed Nay Pyi Taw as the new capital (see map at right).

Map from U.S. Department of State website, www.state.gov

ACTIVITIES AND RESEARCH PROJECTS

LANGUAGE ARTS

1) Bamboo People is full of descriptive language that helps the reader imagine the environment as if he or she were actually there. On pages 31–32, for example, we see the scene on the bus after Chiko is captured by the Burmese army: “We’re already on the outskirts of the city and heading north, where rice paddies and coconut trees line the narrow, flat highway. Women are harvesting rice, their bodies bent, their bamboo hats shaped like upside-down bowls. Thin, straight streams sparkle like wires, dividing the wet field into squares. The last rays of the sun redden, spilling into the water like blood.” Using descriptive language, write a one-page essay describing the environment where you live.

2) Bamboo People is written from the perspectives of Chiko and Tu Reh. Rewrite a chapter from the book from the perspective of one of its other characters.

HISTORICAL STUDIES

1) On the eighth of August, 1988 (8/8/88), hundreds of thousands of people gathered peacefully and demanded that the military regime step down in favor of an elected civilian government in Burma. Find out more about this protest. Who were the major leaders? What was the result of their nonviolent tactics?

2) Why did the government of Burma decide to change the name of their country and the location of its capital? What events led to these decisions? Why do the USA, the UK, and Canada still refuse to recognize the country’s name change?

3) Aung San Suu Kyi is an important figure in the ongoing struggle to free Burma from political oppression. What propelled her involvement in forming the National League for Democracy? Where is she now? Have her protests been successful?

4) In May 2008 Cyclone Nargis hit Burma. The military government initially refused international aid, causing even more problems and suffering for the people of Burma. What else can you find out about this natural disaster? What effects did it have on the land, people, and government?

5) Nonviolent protests have been taking place for decades all across the world, not just in Burma. Where else have such events occurred? Who are some important leaders of nonviolence? How are they similar? How are they different?

ACTIVITIES AND RESEARCH PROJECTS (CONTINUED)

SOCIAL STUDIES/WORLD CULTURES

1) While the official language of Burma is Burmese, there are several different languages used by the many ethnic minorities in the region. Research another language native to the area. What percentage of the population speaks this language? In what part(s) of Burma is this language most prevalent? Is there anywhere else in the world that this language exists?

2) After reading Bamboo People, you now know a little about Burma. Make a list of everything you've learned from the book. What do you wonder about or want to know more about? What kinds of food do the people of Burma eat? You know that most people wear longyi and often use tanaka to protect their skin from the sun. What else can you find out about everyday life in Burma? Once you've done some research, have Burma Day at your school. Your class can prepare traditional foods and wear clothes characteristic of the region. Try to find examples of Burmese music and art to celebrate.

SCIENCE/MATH

1) The bamboo plant is very important to the people of Burma. As Peh explains to Tu Reh, "it can be used for many purposes." Find out more about this plant. Where does it grow? What kind of climate does it need to survive? What are its uses? Can you think of any other uses for this versatile plant?

2) Using popsicle sticks, build a model bamboo hut like the ones described in Bamboo People. You can base your model on pictures of bamboo huts that you find in books at your school library, or on the internet. Is your model to scale? How many people can it house? Is there enough support to withstand rain and wind?

HOW MUCH DO YOU KNOW?

Test your knowledge of Burma and Bamboo People. Match the date, term, or person with its description.

- | | |
|----------------------|---|
| ___ 1948 | 1. A character in Bamboo People . Tu Reh's best friend, he is an aggressive opponent of the Burmese army and does not understand Tu Reh's acts of compassion toward Chiko. |
| ___ 1962 | |
| ___ Daw Widow | 2. A character in Bamboo People . Chiko carries around a picture of her while he is in Burmese army. |
| ___ NLD | 3. An important leader of democracy movements in Burma. |
| ___ Tai | 4. The Burmese word for "older brother." |
| ___ longyi | 5. Burma becomes an independent parliamentary democracy, free from Britain. |
| ___ Lei | 6. A character in Bamboo People . Along with Chiko, he is conscripted into the Burmese army. |
| ___ Karenni | 7. National League for Democracy. |
| ___ 2006 | 8. The military stages a coup in Burma and takes control of the government. |
| ___ Nya Meh | 9. An alternate name for Burma. While "Burma" is used in informal, everyday conversation, this name is generally used in formal, ceremonial speech. |
| ___ 2008 | 10. A character in Bamboo People . She lives next door to Chiko and his mother, and ultimately is the one who decides that Chiko should try to take the teacher's exam. |
| ___ Aung San Suu Kyi | |
| ___ Sa Reh | 11. Hundreds of thousands of people gather to peacefully demand that the military regime step down in favor of an elected civilian government. |
| ___ 8/8/88 | 12. A sheet of cloth worn around the waist by the people of Burma. |
| ___ Ko | 13. A character in Bamboo People . "The Healer." Despite having been captured and assaulted by the Burmese army, she does everything she can to ensure Chiko's recovery. |
| ___ Myanmar | |
| | 14. Cyclone Nargis hits Burma. The military initially refuses international aid. |
| | 15. The government of Burma proclaims Nay Pyi Taw the country's new capital. |
| | 16. An ethnic minority in Burma. |

ANSWER KEY & INTERNET RESOURCES

5 1948	6 Tai	15 2006	1 Sa Reh
8 1962	12 longyi	13 Nya Meh	11 8/8/88
10 Daw Widow	2 Lei	14 2008	4 Ko
7 NLD	16 Karenni	3 Aung San Suu Kyi	9 Myanmar

Suggested websites for further study about Burma:

Bamboo People

<http://www.bamboopeople.org/>

This comprehensive site dedicated to Bamboo People was created by author Mitali Perkins. It includes information about Burma and suggestions for involvement in promoting peace and democracy in the region.

Free Burma Rangers

<http://www.freeburmarangers.org/>

This humanitarian movement is devoted to helping the people in war-torn areas of Burma.

Partners Relief & Development

<http://partnersworld.org/usa/index.php>

Devoted to providing food, medicine, and educational opportunities to the people of Burma through charitable donations.

Burma Campaign UK

<http://www.burmacampaign.org.uk/>

An award-winning organization that works toward democracy and human rights in Burma.

U.S. Campaign for Burma

<http://uscampaignforburma.org>

Supports grassroots activists around the world to achieve the goals of human rights and an end to Burma's military government.

Burma Project/Southeast Asia Initiative

<http://www.soros.org/initiatives/bpsai>

Born out of the Open Society Institute (<http://www.soros.org/>), this initiative promotes awareness of the current situation in Burma.

Karenni Refugees, Karenni Homeland, Karenni Independence Through Education (KITE)

<http://www.karennirefugees.com/>

<http://karennihomeland.com/>

http://www.karenni.org/about_kite.php

Learn more about the Karenni people, their homeland, and the struggle to educate people about their plight.

MEET THE AUTHOR: MITALI PERKINS

“Global encounters, whether face-to-face or with characters in a story, help us to disentangle our true selves from what our own cultural context is commanding us to become.”

Mitali Bose Perkins was born in Kolkata, India. Her name means “friendly” in Bangla, and she had to try and live up to it because the Bose family moved so often—they lived in India, Ghana, Cameroon, London, New York City, and Mexico City before settling in the San Francisco Bay Area when Mitali was in middle school.

Mitali studied political science at Stanford University and public policy at UC Berkeley, and survived academia thanks to a steady diet of kids’ books from public libraries and bookstores. She went on to teach middle school, high school, and college students. She lived in India, Bangladesh, Thailand, and California with her husband and twin sons before moving to Newton, Massachusetts, where the Perkins family lives now.

Mitali’s books include Rickshaw Girl, Monsoon Summer (Delacorte), The Not-So-Star-Spangled Life of Sunita Sen (Little, Brown), Secret Keeper (Delacorte), and the First Daughter books (Dutton).

Mitali conducts author visits at schools, bookstores, and libraries across the country. If you are interested in setting up an author visit, contact info@mitaliperkins.com. To learn more, or to read her blog and think, chat, and learn about life in between cultures, visit her website at www.mitaliperkins.com.

BOOKS BY MITALI PERKINS

Naima wants to help earn money for her family, like her best friend, Saleem, does for his family. When her rash effort to help puts her family deeper in debt, she bravely draws on her resourceful nature and her talents to save the day.

978-1-58089-308-4 • HC • $14.95
978-1-58089-309-1 • PB • $6.95
978-1-60734-140-6 • Ebook • $6.99
Ages 7–10

Two fourteen-year-old boys on opposing sides of the conflict between the Burmese government and the Karenni people form a friendship. Readers follow their dramatic story as each boy is forced to make difficult choices.

978-1-58089-328-2 • HC • $16.95
978-1-60734-227-4 • Ebook • $15.99
Ages 11–14